bringing it all together

presented to the class of 1972 susquehanna university, selinsgrove, pennsylvania chaplain j. stephen bremer

to one who has helped to bring us all together

there are answers in the silent passing of a river, and in the swift flowing of thoughts.

there may be more answers than men have questions for.

and sometimes, he stands still.

but he knows that even when he is standing still,

he is waiting for the moment when his thoughts begin to flow again. so, in his time of stillness, he listens to both whispering and thunder and weighs each one for its worth.

he is judged by what he gives and what he takes away.

and as a man stands apart from another,

he is waiting cautiously . . .

he listens to the fear that holds him from other men and shrouds the things that are deepest in him.

he dreads a moment when a man may discover his naked thoughts and pounce on them.

but, at some time, perhaps only once in his life,

he weighs his risks against the hope of an adventure.

he defies his fear and lets his barriers down to another who has risked the same.

the thoughts of each one wrap themselves around the others'

Our policy
IS
Cooperation
and Consideration

so that neither one's patterns remain as they were.

in its time, the union creates or destroys

it grows from the fear of solitude and is hindered by the fear of being known.

it makes the hollows of the heart and mind bulge with fullness.

what can a man say of the unity he has known but that it is not enough, for it can never be all?

each instance is the silent pause between ebb and flow.

homecoming

unity can create and it can destroy. each one who has come together with another withdraws with more knowledge than he had before.

a man may use that knowledge to build or to hurt.

the creation of a yearbook is a difficult thing, particularly when its design and meaning are so different from the books of previous years. such a job would not be possible without an imaginative and competent staff. my sincere thanks go to the lanthorn editors for their suggestions, dedication and hard work throughout the year. much credit is also due to the staff assistants, gail elser, jan rice and m. j. schirm, and the student photographers, lynn grant and doug morgan. finally, a very special thank-you goes to the lanthorn adviser, mr. george tamke, who helped us immeasurably in "bringing it all together."
